"When students come through the door, we're obligated to help them stay and complete the pathway we promised them,"

-Annebelle Nery,
SAC President

New President

WORDS BY CARRIE GRAHAM
REPORTING BY EDDY VELASQUEZ

In her first months as Santa Ana College president, Annebelle Nery hosted public forums, met with campus leaders and introduced herself as an educational innovator who is ready to maximize student potential.

As a first-generation college student born to Central American and Filipino parents, Nery holds a doctorate of philosophy in sociology from University of California, Riverside. She was most recently Vice President of Instruction at College of the Desert and has over 25 years of higher education experience.

Nery met with SAC staff, administration and foundation members on Feb. 16 at a "Coffee and Conversation" event held at the Johnson Center where she shared that her focus is on making sure that students are able to accomplish their goals.

"When our institutions partner we can serve our students. We can provide access to our students and then we can build up our community," says Nery.

Nery said she is working with other administrators to ensure resources are available for students who hit road blocks, such as the more than 4,000 who were not successful in transfer-level math and English courses.

"The idea of being the best [community college] and changing lives – and then more lives exponentially – it excites me and it excites the people I work with," Nery said.

Nery will be hosting a Town Hall Meeting on March 2 from noon to 1 p.m. in the Johnson Center.

"I think it's really useful having all this area for us between labs and lectures...you can take a break or continue studying while you're waiting for your next class."

Science students at SAC have a new playground for learning on campus. Starting spring semester, the 65,000-square-foot Science Center is home to classrooms for astronomy, earth science, geology, physics, chemistry and biology.

In the Science Center, computers, microscopes and labs are open for students to receive one-on-one assistance from faculty or conduct independent/group study. Tutors are available for science classes, from 9 a.m.-7 p.m. Monday through Thursday. The $70 million project is one of the last campus improvements paid for with Measure Q, a bond measure passed by voters in 2012.
