

Deadpool & Wolverine

July 26, 2024

Ryan Reynolds and Hugh Jackman's chemistry in the first two Deadpool films is undeniable, making them amusing and entertaining. The trailer brought Wolverine back to Disney's Marvel main timeline, making a crossover in Sony x Disney history. This could be the best installment of the Deadpool franchise.

Wicked

November 27, 2024

The trailer for Wicked, featuring Ariana Grande and Cynthia Erivo, showcases more story than expected. Fans of the stage version will appreciate the familiar ending and the promising chemistry between the leads. The film's intriguing visuals, familiar storyline, and strong chemistry make it a must-watch for fans of musical films.

Unlike the last two films, John Krasinski will not be directing. He is still a co-writer.

A Quiet Place introduced sound-sensitive creatures, which attack anything that makes even the slightest sound. The trailer suggests that Day One will be filled with mayhem, potentially turning the franchise into a flawless trilogy and boosting anticipation for A Quiet Place: Part III.

"I'm not afraid. It's the Wizard who should be afraid of me."

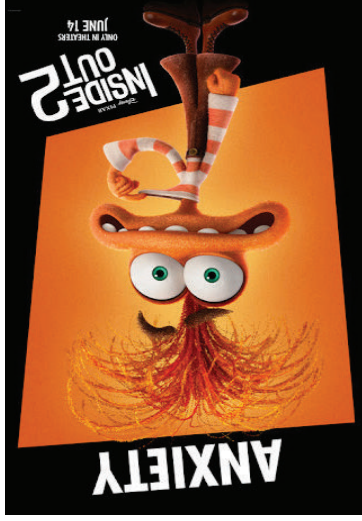

- Elphaba

The Wild Robot

September 27, 2024

The trailer showed such beautiful and colorful animations for this film based on a children's book series. The smooth character movements and stunning, eye-catching colors were enough to make me excited for this film. Dreamworks needs a redeeming film after that unbearable Megamind sequel.

"Oh my gosh! I'm Anxiety. Where can I put my stuff?" - Anxiety

Inside Out 2

June 14, 2024

The original Inside Out was a touching Pixar film that portrayed emotions as characters, filled with joy and sadness. The new character, Anxiety, features Riley's new emotions, making her relatable and bringing joy to the audience. The character model fits well with the name. The trailer sets in enough emotion to prepare for this potential tear-jerker.

"Sometimes, to survive, you must become more than you were programmed to be."
